Connecticut River Scenic Byway Bike Routes

The Connecticut River Scenic Byway region is an ideal place for bicycling. The area has a rich natural landscape, a wealth of heritage resources, and diverse local businesses and activities. The Byway winds through the Connecticut River Valley in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont. This map details routes within the Byway area, connecting the cities of Northampton and Greenfield, MA, Brattleboro, VT, and Keene, NH.
The routes displayed include both off-road bicycle paths and shared roadway routes. Some shared roadway routes may not be suitable for novice or less experienced bicyclists. It is important that all bicyclists consider their riding abilities when choosing the best route to ride. To help bicyclists determine the routes best suited to their abilities, they are color coded to denote a ranking of "easier," "intermediate," or "advanced." The "easier" routes generally include roads with lower traffic volumes, a wider shoulder, and flatter terrain. "Intermediate" routes may have higher traffic volumes, some areas with narrower shoulders and more challenging hills. The "advanced" routes are more suitable for experienced cyclists. These routes may have steeper hills, higher traffic volumes, and places with narrower or no shoulders. The off-road bike paths are considered suitable for all levels, and noted as such on the map.
